

Green-thighed frog

Litoria brevipalmata

Photo : Eva Ford, MRCCC

- This frog looks similar to the Stony-creek frog but with an emerald green or bright blue groin area.
- Large numbers emerge to breed after heavy rain in permanent and temporary swamps with emergent vegetation.
- There are many unknowns about this frog as it is rarely seen when not breeding.

RARE